

COMPLETE 3 DAY HOMECOMING PLANS

Frankfort Fire Dept., Sponsors Carnival, Parade, Water Fights

The Frankfort Fire Department has perfected plans for the biggest attraction they have sponsored in Frankfort by way of a big home coming and carnival to be held on the main street of Frankfort for three afternoons and evenings starting Saturday of this week and continuing through Sunday and Labor Day.

There will be a varied line of amusements including a Ferris Wheel and various rides besides booths and other attractions. The Frankfort band will be heard in concerts. Everyone is invited to attend this gala occasion and special efforts are being put forth to secure a good attendance from all the surrounding towns and villages.

The main street is being decorated with flags, and banners and colored lights. Ample parking space has been provided for, and Fire Chief Henry Lühring states there will be plenty of police protection. Labor Day afternoon will be the outstanding day of the entire carnival. Promptly at 1 o'clock a parade in which decorated floats, various groups and the Mokena and Frankfort bands will participate will form at the Frankfort school grounds and march through the principal streets of the village. The parade will end at the carnival grounds. Immediately following the parade the fire departments of East and West Hazelcrest, South Chicago Heights, and Steger will sponsor a fire drill which will be up to the minute in all details. The same departments will put on a very interesting water fight the same afternoon. Fire Chief Henry Lühring states that this is going to be a most interesting and the largest affair that has been given in Frankfort and for that matter, in any rural community in Will County. Fire Chief Lühring is extending a cordial welcome to the public in general to attend the Frankfort home coming and carnival for 3 days Sept. 3, 4, and 5.

Public Schools Open Sept. 6th

Next Tuesday, Sept. 6th the public schools in this section will open for the new school year. In Tinley Park the Tinley school will open with a teaching staff of seven instructors.

The New Lenox School will open on September 6. The first grade will enroll in the forenoon; the second grade in the afternoon. The others will enroll in the afternoon.

At Mokena the grade school and two year high school will be in charge of the same teaching faculty as last year.

In Orland Park the pupils will go back to the school building whose entire interior has been renewed. The new engineer custodian, Mr. Benson has been very this summer and has effected many changes.

But the improvements in the school plant are not the only changes in the Orland Park schools. The curriculum offerings have been improved and expanded and two new teachers are to be added to the faculty as well. The high school course has been lengthened to three years, and a full commercial department has been added. This new course of study promises to be popular as 15 pupils have already registered and one or two late registrations are expected. Seventeen freshmen have registered and as many sophomores are expected back, so the total high school enrollment will approximate fifty, nearly capacity attendance.

Although the New Lenox boys held a 4 to 1 lead in the fourth inning, Belvidere came up with an 8 run rally in the fifth and chalked down a 5 run lead which finally led to a 4 run victory over New Lenox.

French Girls Make Hit With Mokena Globe Trotters

Two popular young Mokena men Gilbert Hurley and Richard Kohl are speaking a new language since they have returned from a two weeks vacation trip spent in Canada and other points. The new language they now speak is French which they picked up from the intriguing young French Madames of Quebec. The French girls made a hit all right. From Canada the trip took the young men to the eastern cities and New York City with its 1939 World's Fair site, its famous Broadway and Wall street was also very interesting. Next the trip led thru Smoky Mountains in North Carolina. In all the trip covered 3500 miles. One of the features of the southern part of the trip was the sky line highway thru the mountains where the highway runs over the top of the mountains instead of around them.

There will be special services every Sunday during the month of September in commemoration of the golden anniversary. A very interesting history of this church appears on page 5 of this issue.

Attend Republican State Convention

Editor Wm. Semmler and George Bennett of Mokena attended the state Republican convention held at Peoria Wednesday, as delegates. In his keynote speech, Richard J. Lyons Republican nominee for United States Senator declared that the people of Illinois have the right to know what the Republican Party proposes to do to solve the vital problems of the nation. How does the Republican Party propose to put back to work the 12 million of their fellow citizens who are hopelessly walking our streets? What solution has the Republican Party for the farm problem? What is the attitude of the Republican Party toward the millions of people on relief? What will the Republican Party do about the old age pension? Unless the Republican Party answers these and other pressing questions to the satisfaction of the electorate, they have no right to ask their confidence, Mr. Lyons said.

In a lengthy and timely address he outlined step by step how the Republican Party would solve all these problems and pointed out that the Republican Party offers the way out. Not by glowplattitudes, not by empty promises, not by glittering generalities but by a sound, practical and constructive program for recovery.

A special ten car passenger train on the Rock Island railroad brought the Cook County candidates to the convention. Many chartered busses also were used to bring delegates from all over the state.

A lovely table lamp was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Klatt as a remembrance by the relatives.

An Open Letter

To The Frankfort Village Board and Frankfort Fire Department:

Although we recognize that the work of the Frankfort Fire Department is essential to the welfare of the community, it is our conviction that the gambling which has been invited into our town through the carnival is incompatible with the spirit of life and property preservation which spirit exists in a fire-fighting organization.

As those who have accepted Christianity as a way of life we object to gambling activities because such practices definitely violate Christian principles.

In view of the fact that the Coroner of this county; Courtney of Chicago and others are engaging in extensive programs to eliminate gambling devices, we believe it extremely dangerous to invite gambling activities into Frankfort and to set up any additional devices whereby an organization whose purpose it is to preserve life and property should extort property in the form of money from our citizens.

Likewise, we recognize that there are some activities throughout the proposed carnival, such as the fire demonstration, etc., which we can as Christians even recommend. However, the general tone of a carnival is one of irresponsible gaiety, a holiday spirit which is incompatible with the spirit of Sunday. The Christian observance of Sunday is a recognition of the fact that there is something which the Christian life possesses which is distinct from the life of a world in which the Kingdom of God has not been fulfilled. However, since as Christians our task is to work in order to bring about the fulfillment of the Kingdom, we find it necessary to frankly protest against the operation of the carnival on the Lord's Day.

Obviously, Sunday will be at least one of the biggest days of the carnival, meaning that a good sum of money will be taken in. We recognize both this and the fact that the financial aid received will be directed toward a good cause—that of purchasing fire equipment. However, the means of securing the needed finances is not justified by the end in view. Certainly, the village could by the necessary enactments appropriate the funds by legitimate means.

The economic soundness of the carnival may be questioned in view of the fact that the cream of the profit will go to outsiders who are engaged in the carnival racket.

Since gambling and engaged in carnival spirit on Sunday is incompatible with the Christian way of life, and since it is extremely dangerous at this time to sanction gambling activities, and since the economic soundness of the policy may be questioned, giving recognition to the good intentions of the Village Board and Frankfort Fire Department, we protest these activities and enter a plea that some more legitimate means be found to finance our fire protection program.

Sincerely yours,
Leaders of the Young People's group of St. Peter's Evang. & Ref. Church and Methodist Church of Frankfort.

Dells Filled With Scenic Beauty

Quite a number of people from this section have visited the Dells of Wisconsin and as was stated last week in a writeup about the trip made by the Editor to the Dells recently, that a further description of the Dells would be given, we are herewith giving a few highlights on this natural wonder.

Harmoniously indeed, have Mother nature and Old Father time labored vieing with each other in bygone ages, bestowing, with lavish hands, upon the region of the Wisconsin Dells, a wealth of scenic beauty.

Towering bluffs, unique rock formations, such as found nowhere else in the world, sheer precipices, canyons, whose precipitous walls form odd caverns, rock strata of grotesque and spectacular forms; these are the wonderful scenic attractions at the Wisconsin Dells.

In shady glens the rich humus nurtures an endless variety of dainty ferns and wild flowers. Here nature's grandeur compels complete relaxation.

The boat trips to the Upper and Lower Dells, where wondrous panoramas are unfolded in rapid succession, provide true recreation, a pleasant memory never to be forgotten.

The Gorge of the Dells is 9 1/2 miles long, its walls being nearly 100 feet high in places. The river, thus being strided by high banks, has cut a deep and narrow channel thru the sandstone and is only 50 feet wide at some points, but several (Continued on back page)

MOKENA GIRL MARRIED IN ST. JUDE'S CHURCH

At nine o'clock, Thursday morning, in the St. Jude's Catholic Church in New Lenox, at a nuptial mass in charge of the priest of the parish, Rev. Father Roman, Miss Myrtle Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Roberts of Mokena and Raymond Walsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Walsh of Manhattan, were united in marriage. The single ring ceremony was used.

Flowers bedecked the church altars and with the early morning sun streaming in thru the stained glass window, a lovely setting was presented for a lovely service.

To the soft strains of organ music the bridal party entered the church, the bride and groom entering together.

The bride was becomingly gowned in an ensemble of dark blue velvet with hat and shoulder veil to match and wearing a shoulder corsage of small white roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Fred Werner of Mokena in a duobonnet ensemble and by Miss Margaret McCoy, of Manhattan, cousin of the groom in an ensemble of Postman's blue. The groom was attended by Michel Roberts, brother of the bride and by his brother Vincent Walsh.

A wedding breakfast was served in the home of the bride's parents to the immediate families and close relatives.

The home was decorated in the bride's chosen colors, blue and white and with garden flowers. A large wedding cake graced the center of the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Walsh left by motor for a wedding trip in the south and upon their return will go to house-keeping on a farm in Manhattan.

Far From Washington's Madding Crowd, Your Congressman Takes His 'Vacation'

Pretty Swell, a Job Like That! But Get Him in a Corner And Your 'Ambassador' to Washington Will Admit His Envied Job Is a $10,000 Pain in the Neck!

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

Senator Doakes was on vacation. A few weeks ago congress adjourned for the summer and Mr. Doakes left promptly for home to enjoy a well earned rest. So, having nothing to think about after that hectic past winter with its wages-and-hours bill, its reorganization bill, its farm bill and tax bills, we expected to find the Senator in a congenially expansive mood. That's where we made our mistake.

He wasn't sitting under a tree sipping mint julep, though the day was hot. Instead we found him sweltering in his home town law office, wishing it would come winter again pretty soon so he could get back to the peace and quiet of official Washington.

"These summers are always the same," he complained when we finally got into his office. "Always fences to mend, speeches to make, picnics to attend. And this year, to make it worse, everybody in the state except me is up for re-election!"

Last winter Senator Doakes received his quota of visitors from home and most of them went away from his office muttering, "Pretty swell, a job like that!" To which the senator will agree; a job like that is pretty swell, if you can get it, if you can hold it, and if it doesn't drive you crazy.

How It's Done.

It pays $10,000 a year and traveling expenses, but to get it you must first invest a good many years of your life shaking the right hands, investing your money in the right places and building up your political prestige by winning a series of minor jobs. You must dive into the rough-and-tumble school of local politics to learn by bitter experience what the taxpayers like and what your political friends don't like. You emerge a polished politician, like the men who now hold down our 96 seats in the senate and our 435 seats in the house.

But a congressman or senator does much more than hold down his seat in the legislative chamber. Indeed, no better refuge for a lazy man could be imagined than sitting through endless hours of debate and filibusters. To keep the folks back home happy (which, after all, is the important thing) our Ambassador to Washington must tend to that endless series of chores concerning Mrs. Jones' pension, Homeville's WPA project and Jim Smith's political job.

Answering his mail is in itself a gigantic job for your congressman. Each morning brings a new parade of protests, pleas and suggestions from that army of helpful constituents who believe in "writing to their congressman." Next comes a glance at the home district newspapers which may or may not have knifed him in the back last week. About that time his secretary announces the Peter Browns and their three children, just in from home to look around Washington. They thought it would be nice to drop around and see their congressman.

And, incidentally, he must appear in congress occasionally to lift his voice in praise of, or objection to, a certain measure. Before speaking, he must turn himself into an amateur brain truster, hustling to the congressional library to arm himself with facts and figures that mean something.

This, then, is the life your Ambassador to Washington leads while congress is in session. If you worked that hard, you'd need a vacation, which is what we were speaking of above. But, as one homeward bound lawmaker remarked this summer, a congressman at ease is by no means a congressman taking it easy. The first thing he must do upon arriving home is call a conference of his advisers to discover how the wind blows. From that meeting is plotted a definite course he will follow during the summer fore the average summer is over, he will probably make one or two trips back to Washington.

ONE WAY TO SPEND THE SUMMER—Members of the congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority, pause at Chickamauga, Tenn., on a particularly hot afternoon, to inspect one of TVA's dams.

This Year—of all Years!

But the current summer isn't average, just as the last congressional session wasn't average. Since before Christmas the spectre of election probably has hung over the head of your legislator. His henchmen back home early began sending word of the rising opposition forces that had to be combated somehow. Elections are always tougher for the incumbent; he must defend his record against the challenge.

It will be no wonder if your congressman goes back to Washington next winter thankful that his "vacation" is over, because his campaign can be devastatingly tiresome. On parade before the voters will be his personal appearance, his family connections or lack of them, his ability to tell jokes and play the fiddle.

The wizened old heads at Washington, who have held their jobs so long that re-election is automatic, shake their heads at this frantic rummaging around after votes. Says one:

"If those fellows were intelligent, they would do their campaigning in the off year. The voters haven't nearly the depths of dumbness they are credited with. They know they are getting a last-minute pat on the back. Now, I figure I won this year's election last year. A good many of my colleagues went fishing during the summer. I spent two months calling on the voters. They appreciate it, and I expect a good majority in November."

Which is all easy enough to say if you're a George Norris or William Borah, but it doesn't always hold true. Many a congressman has spent every summer at home and given unstintingly of his time to keep the folks happy, yet his troubles just keep growing. Maybe he'll squeeze through the election next November, but if he does there'll be a new crop of patronage seekers on his trail. There'll also be someone hanging around to make sure he keeps those last few promises he made against his better judgment.

Pretty nice, a job like that!

● Merits of sugar law influence Idaho primaries. . . What would happen if the United States was only country in world to own gold?

WASHINGTON. — People coming back to Washington from Idaho say that the man whose nose ought to be out of joint over the defeat of Sen. James P. Pope, who shares with George L. Berry the distinction of being the only sitting senators to be defeated so far in primaries—or conventions for that matter—is Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Pope's defeat, they say, is due entirely to dissatisfaction over the working of the present sugar policies of the department of agriculture. The beet sugar farmers in Idaho do not like the quotas imposed by Mr. Wallace, it is explained, and they do not like the effects of the quotas on sugar prices.

Critics of the present Wallace sugar plan assert that not only does the plan curtail sharply the amount of beets the mountain state farmers can raise, but the further ideas of Mr. Wallace about allowing enough imports to keep prices down are very irritating to the farmers. It so happens that the price of sugar declined again just before the day of the Idaho primary, and the results were very unfortunate for Mr. Pope.

When it is considered that Senator Pope was defeated by a fairly narrow margin—that a change of little more than 3 per cent of the vote from his opponent would have renominated him—this factor becomes of some interest. It is important whether or not it is true, as charged, that enough Republicans voted in the Democratic primary, in order to hit President Roosevelt, to change the result. For it is entirely possible that even if this very plausible charge about Republican voters is true, Senator Pope might easily have been nominated despite it, had it not been for the additional sugar load he was carrying.

Merits of Sugar Law First With Idaho Voters

People just back from the state say that Rep. D. Worth Clark dwelt at length in his stump campaign against Pope on the fact that he had opposed the law giving Secretary Wallace the power to dictate sugar quotas, and especially sugar prices, while Senator Pope had voted for it. The merits of the sugar law, it is said, seemed to interest the Idaho voters a great deal more than whether Pope had been 100 per cent for the President, and whether Clark was a "Yes, but" New Dealer.

No one who has not studied the importance of the beet sugar industry on politics through the "Mormon country" at first hand can appreciate the situation. But there have been many demonstrations, of which the defeat of Senator Pope may be the most recent.

The most amazing turnover in political history was caused in Idaho, Colorado and adjoining states by the sugar situation in 1924. Early that summer the tariff commission handed President Coolidge a report on sugar, recommending a reduction in the sugar tariff. Sen. Robert M. La Follette had just been nominated by the Progressives for President. He called on President Coolidge to act at once and reduce the sugar tariff.

Not satisfied with this, he kept the issue alive from June to November, demanding to know what Coolidge was going to do. Coolidge said nothing, paying no more attention to this than he did to the demand of the third candidate, John W. Davis, that he join Davis in denouncing the Ku Klux Klan.

But in some way word was gotten to the Republican leaders in Colorado, Idaho, Utah and the other beet sugar states that Coolidge did not intend to take any action about reducing the sugar tariff. Whereas La Follette kept calling attention to his own position, which was that the tariff should be reduced.

Early polls had shown this group of states strongly for La Follette. On election day they went strongly for Coolidge.

What Would Happen If U. S. Owned All the Gold?

What would happen if the governments throughout the world that have no gold, or very little, should suddenly decide that they were no longer interested? Especially if the present rapid movement of all gold in the world toward the treasury of the United States government should continue until the United States was practically the only government in the world that had any?

There is a simple answer to this, but it doesn't mean anything. The answer is that gold would thereupon possess only its commodity value. Which is to say that gold would be just what the demand for it would justify, for ornaments, dental work, and various other uses where its extraordinary ability to withstand the various ravages of time makes it valuable.

The answer does not mean anything because nobody has even the foggiest idea of what that value would be. At present there is just one big buyer of gold. That is the United States government, which is willing to pay anybody, anywhere in the world, $35 an ounce for it. Except of course to American citizens who have been holding out on the government by hoarding gold acquired at its old value of slightly more than $20 an ounce.

But even for commercial uses gold is not now in the proud position it occupied a very few years back. Platinum is superior to gold in some of these uses. It will resist certain destructive acids more successfully than gold. Its price has been declining. No one is sure what the platinum producers could do to the price if it became in their interest to market it in quantities instead of holding the price up. If one could know what the platinum production possibilities are, one could estimate much more accurately what the price of gold would be if it should some day be entirely separated from its monetary value.

Hoarding Gold Outlaced, People Hoard Platinum

Actually a good many people in this country, prevented by law from hoarding gold, but very much afraid of inflation and anxious to hedge against it, have been hoarding platinum. There is even the hope of profit, for if that world war we have been worried about for several years should break out, it is thought that the price of platinum would advance. Especially if the war involved Russia.

Lack of knowledge about the possibilities of platinum production, however, makes hoarding platinum quite a gamble.

Russia, incidentally, is also terribly important on this question of the real value of gold—whether the United States treasury is not gambling and in danger of coming a cropper in making such a huge investment in the yellow metal. The Soviet government is in a better position to conceal her activities than any other country in the world. She proved that back in the Hoover administration when, first, in a year of a huge wheat crop, and second, in a year of near famine, she played the market in this country on grain futures at a profit running into hundreds of millions of dollars.

At present, no one knows what the possibilities of gold production are in Russia. Actually she is almost equal to South Africa, as far as public figures are concerned.

But Uncle Sam is the only buyer. Occasionally the British buy a little, but on the whole the world's gold supply has been drifting toward this country's stocks. Gold is pouring in from Europe and Japan, to finance war purchases. As long as it will buy goods in America, certainly there will be no gestures to discourage Washington from regarding it as the most important thing in the world.

President Sours on Berry, His Great Ally

Greatly to the surprise of most outside observers who studied the situation on the ground, Sen. George L. Berry ran second in the primary. They had figured he would run third or fourth. It would take too much space to tell all the activities of George Berry in behalf of the President, beginning in 1932 and continuing until about a month before the adjournment of the last session of congress.

Prominent among these activities was Labor's Non-Partisan league, which might more accurately have been called "Labor's Pro-Roosevelt league." He was regarded as such a loyal and valuable servant of the New Deal that several extraordinary things happened. It is commonly believed in Tennessee that President Roosevelt himself was responsible for Berry's appointment to the senate after the death of Sen. Nathan L. Bachman.

At any rate, before that mystic date, about a month before the end of the last session, when diplomatic relations between the President and Berry were severed, there was every indication that the White House was most anxious for Berry to be elected. Rep. Sam McReynolds of Tennessee aspired to the senate. It looked as though he might be nominated. So President Roosevelt wrote him a strong letter urging him to stay in the house. The President built up McReynolds' value to the administration because he was chairman of the house foreign affairs committee. This amused Washington no end, for most folks who know their way around think this particular committee is useful chiefly in winning social prestige in the diplomatic set for its members. Actually it does not pass on treaties, or diplomatic appointments, as the senate foreign relations committee does.

But apparently Roosevelt wanted Berry to stay in the senate, at that time. Then it became expedient, in meeting A. E. Morgan's charges in the marble case, to throw Berry overboard.

But even Tennessee proves that a strong state organization is much more important than any outside influence—federal, labor, or what not.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Putty That Sticks.—To make putty stick to window panes use a small quantity of white lead; mix thoroughly with the putty.

Economy Note.—Pieces of ribbon that come on gift boxes may be utilized in making shoulder straps for underwear. Cut them into six or eight-inch strips.

Clean With Soda.—If there is a constant smell of burning when cooking is going on, examine gas burners. They are probably filled with sediment from "boilovers."

Peeling Onions.—When you have a number of onions to peel, cover them with hot water, let them stand a minute or two and that thin skin, so hard to get off, can be removed as if by magic.

Perspiration Marks.—To remove perspiration marks from white silk, mix some bicarbonate of soda to a stiff paste with cold water. Spread thickly on the parts and leave for an hour or so before washing. This will also remove scorch marks if they are not very bad.

HUB OF PEACE

● International conferences never ruffle dignity of Switzerland's famous Lake Geneva, one of the world's most beautiful inland vacation spots.

Prepared by National Geographic Society. Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE Lake Geneva country, self-styled "peace hub of the world," has learned to take international crises in its stride. Here, for 2,000 years, Caesars, Napoleons, bishops and barons have fought and ruled, come and gone, but Lake Geneva stays, and the ancient River Rhone "keeps right on rollin'" into one end of the lake and out the other.

Lake Geneva lies in a sort of peninsula that juts out from Switzerland's southwest corner into France. In fact, most of its southern shore is French territory, and two-fifths of the lake itself belongs to France.

Geneva people, if they want to go for a Sunday automobile ride, have but one main road on which they can drive more than a few miles without having to cross the French frontier. Most motorists like to drive in Switzerland, so the single highway along the lake's north shore is often jammed with traffic on pleasant Sunday afternoons.

Far up in the Alps, 6,000 feet above the sea and 75 miles from the actual lake basin, you see where Lake Geneva is born. The massive Rhone glacier, glistening greenish-white in the sun, lies on a mountainside surrounded by towering precipices and snow-clad peaks.

Lake Geneva fills a deep mountain abyss in which the Eiffel tower (984 feet high) would sink out of sight. The lake's surface is 1,230 feet above the sea, but the deepest hole in its bottom goes down 1,015 feet, almost sea level. Mountains 6,000 feet high tower close around its eastern end, but gradually give way to rolling green hills.

Lake Fronts

Like Follies Chorus

The lake fronts of all the towns around Lake Geneva are as uniformly lovely as the girls in a follies chorus and as much alike as their costumes. Always there is a sturdy sea wall, against which waves dash high when storm winds blow; a neat stone balustrade; formal rows of green plane trees, their tops pruned to equal height and flat umbrella shape as carefully as any hedge; flower beds; grass plots; park benches; gravel walks paralleling the shore; and a neat wharf.

Nyon's lake front is like them all, and, like most Lake Geneva towns, too, it has its castle, high on the hill, the roofs of its five towers as sharp as pencil points. But this castle seems to smile instead of frown, perhaps because there are flower boxes in its windows, a little park with more bright flowers around it, and homely terraced vegetable gardens sloping up to its very foot.

Entering the ghost-gray walls through a gate dated 1572, you find on the first floor a musty museum that preserves a few bits of Nyons' past: Roman tiles and carvings; ancient cannon; wax figures in the bright costumes of other days. A spiral stair in one of the round corner towers leads to neat court-rooms and offices for the judges.

THE prisoners, on the top floor, if they have an eye for beauty, must spend much time gazing out the windows. Across the lake, beyond the green hills of the French shore to the south, Mont Blanc, highest of Europe's peaks, looms like a white cloud on clear days. Back of the town rise the peaks of the Jura range along the Swiss-French border on the north. To the east Grand Lac broadens to a width of more than eight miles and looks like the sea.

The seaward houses of Nyons' 5,000 citizens cluster their white and gray walls and red-brown roofs closely around and beneath the castle. Narrow cobbled streets with sidewalks "one man wide" or none at all thread between them up the hill. But as you explore them the medieval peace is shattered by the blast of an auto horn, and you jump aside just in time as a modern sedan rushes down over the cobbles.

Most waterfront towns on Switzerland's Lake Geneva look the same from the shore. Here is a side-wheeled pleasure boat heading out over the deep blue waters.

Pottery, Politics Brought Fame

Pottery, long before politics, brought fame to Nyon. You may visit the old pottery factory, its ancient wooden stairs worn hollow, its walls and floor gray with the accumulated clay of 150 years. In this same building pottery has been manufactured continuously since the days of the American Revolution. Once it produced the finest ware, all hand-made, decorated with great artistry. Those pieces now are rare, much sought after by collectors who pay high prices, for they are produced no more.

Along the lake's north shore, eastward from Nyon, vineyards crowd every inch of space on the hillsides that rise steeper and steeper from the water's edge. They are planted so close to the edge of the road that in some places you can reach out from your car seats to pick fat bunches of grapes right off the vines.

AS THE hillsides grow steeper, innumerable terraces rise in steps from the water's edge. Each terrace, held in place by its stone retaining wall, supports a few square yards of soil that in some places slopes at almost a 45-degree angle.

The soil washes down when it rains on such steep slopes, even with the stone walls to hold it back. But every winter the farmers dig up the soil that has washed to the bottom of the terraces, carry it back up in baskets on their backs, and spread it again evenly over the slopes.

Up and down the hillsides you notice innumerable tiny flashes of light twinkling against the background of green leaves.

They are scarecrows. They are bits of polished metal, hung among the vines to be swung by the wind, reflect the sunlight, and scare the birds.

Bustling center of this rich farming region of the lake's north shore is Lausanne, sprawled over three high hills above its lake port, Ouchy, which, incidentally, claims the only natural bathing beach in Switzerland.

Lausanne is another of the "conference cities." In 1912 a treaty signed here ended the war between Turkey and Italy, and a conference in 1922-23 resulted in the signing of 17 different treaties and agreements.

When Lausanne Moved to the Hills

Looking down your neighbor's chimney is no novelty here. Leaning over the balustrade on one high bridge, you can see straight down into the chimney pots of houses in the ravine below, while their smoke drifts up into your nostrils. Many a narrow street winds upward steep as a mountain path, and in some places long flights of steps take you from one level to another. History says the Lausanne took to the hills after a disastrous defeat in the Fourth century, and there they stayed.

On a cliff on the Cite, chief of the three hills, Lausanne's cathedral towers dominate the skyline. Its beautiful rose window was in place more than 200 years before Columbus came to America. The cathedral has been Protestant for 400 years, since the day of the "Great Disputation," in 1536, when John Calvin and other leaders of the Reformation wrested control from the Catholic clergy.

SAMUEL: SPIRITUAL REVIVAL

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 7:3-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—Prepare your hearts unto the Lord, and serve him only. I Samuel 7:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Samuel Was Old
JUNIOR TOPIC—When Samuel Grew Old
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Putting God First
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Price Spiritual Revival?

"Revivals are costly. The spiritual awakening which our country so much needs must begin with a spiritual deepening which the church so much needs. There is a price to be paid . . . Strange gods must be put away, gods of worldly pleasure, worldly ambition, love of ease and self-gratification. It is the unwillingness to pay the price that keeps us from the richness and power of the full spiritual life" (Prof. L. M. Lowell).

Israel had come to the place where the people recognized that they were on the brink of national disaster. They knew they had come to the end of the trail, and were ready to do something about it.

I. Return Unto the Lord (v. 3.).

Samuel appears in his first public ministry to call on his people to return to the Lord. Back of that public act is the history of a godly life and devoted service to the Lord and to His nation. Such a man can consistently urge others to turn to God.

The response of the people was wholehearted. They were thoroughly sick of their sin and separation from the favor of God. The earnest of their sincerity was their obedience to the admonition of Samuel that they turn from idolatry.

II. Put Away False Gods (vv. 3, 4).

Israel had learned from their heathen neighbors to worship their false gods. These they must put away if God was to be able to bless them. The same prerequisite to spiritual revival exists today. But some may say, we do not worship heathen gods. Perhaps not, and yet one is astonished at the close similarity between the ritual and worship of some secret cults and orders and the ancient religions of heathendom.

The fact is that we have set up many new gods—money, fashion, social position, and what not. The command needs to go out again through God's messengers, "Put away the foreign gods."

III. Gather Together and Pray (vv. 5, 6).

Spiritual life thrives on the gathering together of God's people. The crisis in Israel was met by a great convocation of the people. We need to revive the great soul-stirring religious gatherings of a generation ago.

"I will pray," said Samuel. He was a great intercessor. (See I Sam. 15:11; Ps. 99:6; Jer. 15:1.) Revival never comes without a history of faithful intercession on the part of those whose hearts are really burdened. Ask yourself, How much have I really prayed for a revival in my church, my community, and my nation? If I should begin to pray in earnest, would not God hear me and answer?

IV. God Will Save Us (v. 8).

"Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save, neither his ear heavy that it cannot hear" (Isa. 59:1). "Thus saith the Lord . . . have I no power to deliver?" (Isa. 50:1, 2). God saved Israel and delivered them out of the hands of their enemies. The Philistines, seeing them gathered together to pray, assumed that they were preparing to fight and attacked. In the previous battle at that very spot (I Sam. 4:1-10) Israel had fought with the weapons of men and been disgracefully defeated. Now they fought with the weapon of prayer and faith in God, and great was the victory.

America is valiantly battling against the social and economic problems of these distressing days, but one fears that all too often the weapons are those of the arm of flesh which will fail us. Let us look up instead of to one another. "God will save us" (v. 8).

V. Ebenezer (v. 12).

Our forefathers, familiar with the truth of Scripture, used biblical words in naming their children. The present generation all too often know the names simply as the strange signatures on old letters. The word "Ebenezer" might well merit a bit of a revival itself. Here Israel had met a disastrous defeat. They were broken by it and had become an almost hopeless people. Now God had given them victory in the very same spot and they raised a stone of remembrance of God's help. The word "Ebenezer" means "stone of help," but also carries with it the meaning of Samuel's word, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us" (v. 12).

There is an inspiring word of hope here for every troubled soul. You may, like Israel, have fallen into sin. Your life may be defeated. You may be utterly discouraged. Return to the Lord, put away sin, gather with God's people, pray, and God will give you victory, even at the very point of former defeat.

Will Your Child Be Ready For School?

Noted Food Authority Outlines a Correct Diet for the Growing Youngster

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

WHEN school closed last June, most parents looked forward to the long weeks ahead when their children could play in the sunshine, get plenty of rest, and build up a splendid fund of vitality to last them all through the new school year.

Some mothers resolved to do everything possible to prevent a recurrence of last season's disheartening colds.

Others planned to look into a blood-building diet that would give Mary or Johnnie more pep and rosier cheeks. Perhaps there were teeth that required attention, or a nose or throat condition to be corrected. Now, within a few weeks, the children will be returning to school, or in some cases beginning their school life.

Every mother should ask herself whether she has made the most of the opportunities offered by the vacation period.

Have you put forth a conscientious effort toward making your children 100 per cent fit for school? If not, there is still time! You cannot finish the job in a few weeks, but you can make a good start. And you owe it to your children to begin at once.

For whether they enjoy school or find it tedious, whether they make excellent records or lag behind their fellows, depends in large measure upon their physical fitness.

Every child is entitled to good health, safeguarded by high resistance. And in this age of amazing scientific discoveries, every child should enjoy these blessings.

Top health and resistance to disease are the result of an intelligently planned and carefully executed health program. It should include proper diet, adequate sleep and rest, an abundance of sunshine and fresh air, freedom from physical defects, and the avoidance of physical or mental strain, or fatigue.

Diet—the Key to Health

Perhaps the most important factor of all is the carefully balanced diet. When planned to take full advantage of modern nutritional discoveries, it will insure normal growth and health, and build up high resistance that is like a protecting wall to safeguard your children.

With our present knowledge of the power of food, there should not be one ill-nourished child in our land. Yet the spectre of malnutrition rears its ugly head among children of the well-to-do as well as in homes where money is scarce. For, as a rule, it is not lack of money, but lack of knowledge of food values, or faulty eating habits which are responsible for the tragedy of an incorrectly fed child.

Don't Overlook Protective Foods

A child's diet should be built upon a foundation of the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Milk takes precedence over all of these because it is an absolute necessity if children are to develop strong, straight bones and sound teeth.

The penalty for breaking this fundamental rule is retarded growth, fragile, crooked bones, decayed teeth and possibly nervousness. How dare any mother inflict such punishment upon her children? A fine amount of calcium, high grade protein, and some of every known vitamin can be furnished so easily by providing children with a quart of milk daily—either as a beverage, or in soups, cream sauces, puddings, cocoa or with cereals.

An Egg Every Day

Eggs rank next to milk in importance, because of their protein, iron and vitamins. A child's diet should normally include one egg daily, or at least three or four weekly.

Green, leafy vegetables must not be neglected, as they supply iron and precious vitamins. Yellow vegetables, such as carrots and sweet potatoes are notable as a source of vitamin A.

Fruits, especially the citrus varieties, are important for their vitamin C, which helps to safeguard the health of teeth and gums. However, tomatoes, or tomato juice may also be used as a source of this vitamin. Bananas are an excellent fruit for children. Dried fruits furnish iron and are high in energy values. Fruits and vegetables in general are likewise an important aid to regular elimination.

As a rule, school children may have lean meat, fish, chicken or liver once a day, and a second protein food, such as cheese or legumes, is usually introduced at another meal.

Energy Foods in Abundance

There must be plenty of energy foods, such as potatoes, rice, macaroni, bread and butter, and cereals, to help prevent the physical fatigue which lowers resistance. At least one starchy food belongs in every meal.

A well-cooked cereal should be provided once daily; in warm weather a ready-to-eat cereal may be used instead. In order to provide an abundance of minerals, and vitamin B, nutritionists place emphasis upon the whole grain varieties.

For desserts, choose rice, tapioca and bread puddings; gelatine, either plain or with fruit; fresh or stewed fruit; milk sherbets or ice cream.

In planning meals for children, it is important at all times to keep the menus simple, and prepare foods so that they are appetizing and easily digestible.

Aids to Good Nutrition

It is important also to bear in mind that the most perfect diet will not provide sound nutrition unless the food is properly digested and assimilated. Adequate sleep and rest, which do away with fatigue, are therefore essential. However perfect the diet, overexertion and undue fatigue, if continued, will soon bring about a state of lowered resistance.

In planning a program of daily living that will make and keep your children fit for school, put food first. But consider also rest, fresh air and sunshine, and regular habits. It would be well, too, to check up on the child's general health before he returns to school, so that he will not be handicapped by some physical defect, such as bad teeth, diseased tonsils, faulty vision or impaired hearing—all of which interfere with the ability to learn.

Never forget for a moment that a child's happiness and success are closely related to his health. All mothers should remember this, for it is no exaggeration to say that THE POWER OF A NATION DEPENDS UPON THE HEALTH OF ITS CHILDREN.

Miss A. G. M.—The bleaching agent used in wheat flour is not objectionable and this product makes a perfectly satisfactory food. It is desirable to include in the diet every day some products made from whole grain flours, as they are richer in minerals and vitamins. But that should not be interpreted to mean that white flour should be avoided.

Luncheon was served after which all gathered around the fire and sang Sunday School songs and popular songs. While thus by the fire a huge envelope was presented Marion, and upon opening it she found it filled with smaller envelopes and upon opening them, found each one contained a lovely handkerchief with a verse from each class member. Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, To a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary. And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favoured, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus" (Luke 1:26-31).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus was the son of a virgin. He was appointed to speak God's word and to appear to mortals in such a form of humanity as they could understand as well as perceive. Mary's conception of him was spiritual, for only purity could reflect Truth and Love, which were plainly incarnate in the good and pure Christ Jesus" (p. 332).

1888 Ev. Christ Lutheran Church at Orland 1938 Rounds Out 50 Yrs. Community Service

For half a century the Ev. Christ Lutheran church at Orland Park has served its community in a spiritual way and this golden milestone in the life of the congregation and church is to be fittingly commemorated during the entire month of September with special jubilee services each Sunday. The following is the history for the past half century of the life and progress of the Ev. Lutheran Christ Congregation in Orland Park:

The Ev. Lutheran Christ Congregation of Orland Park, Illinois was founded on September 16, 1888. On that day the constitution was adopted by 10 members and signed by them in the next meeting, on October 21 of the same year. Two of the charter members, George Vogt and Henry Utke, are still with us.

For more than four years before the Congregation was founded, the Rev. J. C. H. Martin, of New Bremen, Illinois, conducted services here at Orland, preaching in different homes and in the village school. When the Congregation was founded, Pastor Th. Buenger, the successor of Pastor Martin at New Bremen, was entrusted with the pastorate of the newly organized Christ Congregation. In the year of 1891, Pastor Buenger was called away, and Pastor W. Krebs, who succeeded him at New Bremen, continued to serve the Orland Congregation until it called its own Pastor in the year of 1898. In the mean time, the Congregation felt the need of a Church Building for its growing membership. This need was supplied in the erection of the present church building, including a roomy sacristy for instruction purposes and other meetings. The new House of Worship was dedicated to the service of the Triune God on February 6th, 1898. Thus the Congregation in this present year of grace, 1938, is observing a two-fold jubilee: the 50th Anniversary of its founding and the 40th of its Church Dedication.

The first local pastor of the Ev. Lutheran Christ Congregation was the Rev. John H. H. Schulz. Being called as a candidate to the ministry from the Seminary at Springfield, Illinois, he was ordained and installed by Pastor Krebs on September 4th, 1898. He thereby entered upon a period of 23 years of faithful service to this Congregation and to the Lord Jesus. On March 13th, 1921, Pastor Schulz was granted a release by the Congregation, to accept a call to Ash Grove, Illinois. Pastor Schulz and his faithful wife and helpmate have since been called and translated by God to the Church Triumphant in heaven. The sainted Rev. Schulz was succeeded in this field of labor by Pastor Walter C. Greve. The Congregation called the Rev. Greve on April 3rd, 1921, and he rendered it valuable service in Church and School until July, 1928, when he accepted a call to another congregation. In the same year, the Rev. W. H. Medler became Pastor Greve's successor, being installed on September 2, 1928. Pastor Medler served the Congregation faithfully until February 4th, 1931, when he accepted a call as assistant missionary-at-large to the North Illinois District. On March 15th, 1931, the Congregation issued the call to the present Pastor Adolf Lach, who was installed on May 3rd, 1931, by the Rev. F. L. Treskow, of Tinley Park, and now has served the Church with the divine and blessed Gospel Truths for more than 7 years.

At present the Congregation numbers about 250 souls, 180 communicants, 39 voting members. There is ample provision for a thorough religious training of its children and others. Divine services in English have for some time been conducted every Sunday, and German services are still conducted every other Sunday. A Sunday School has now existed without any interval for over 7 years. Its present enrollment numbers about 30 children. Also a well established parochial school is being fostered by the Congregation. Its school term closed the end of May with an enrollment of 25 children, being instructed by the Pastor in the Word of God and the other secular subjects necessary in preparation for high school. A modern school building was erected in 1922, being dedicated on October 29th, of the same year. At present the latest type of heating and ventilating system is being installed, and the basement is being completely remodeled and renovated at an approximate expenditure of not less than $600.00. The interior of the Church also has been newly decorated this spring. The entire project is nearing completion, and at the beginning of the Jubilee month of September, both Church and School will appear, at least the interior, in their festive garb, to welcome us and all our guests, who with us will enter to worship and to praise God for all the blessings He has bestowed upon us in His mercy, jointly and individually, during the past 50 years of Gospel preaching, and Who is still with us today.

A church society, which was destined to accomplish much good for the Church and beyond its bounds, is our Ladies' Aid. It was organized on May 3rd, 1897, and one of its original members, Mrs. Louise Nicolai, is still with us. The Society numbers at present 34 ladies. Since its beginning, the Ladies' Aid has always proven very helpful and willing to aid their Church in its work at home and in general. In the history of the Congregation, many fine monuments have been erected, which testify of the loyalty and faithfulness of our women to God and their Church, and which speak of their untiring interest to continue the good work. In recent depression years the Ladies' Aid has rendered the Congregation invaluable service and financial assistance. The present modernization program of the school building is taken over and will be paid for by the Ladies' Aid.

A fine helpmeet to the Ladies' Aid in active church work is the young people's society, which has been re-organized on May 7th, 1936, and is since known among us as The Walther League, named so after Dr. C. F. W. Walther, the founder of Synod and its young people's organization in America. The adoption by our society of the International Walther League Program of Christian Knowledge and Christian Service, should prove very helpful to our young people not only in the way of their own spiritual progress, but also in the way of development of talent and greater usefulness to the Church and the world. Besides the fine educational program which is offered to our entire youth through its League, the Society recently helped the Congregation in a landscaping project and in the beautifying of the grounds around the Church building by planting nice shrubbery at the front and rear entrances. For the jubilee of the Congregation, the Walther League Society has decided to purchase a beautiful carpet to be laid at the Altar and in the center isle of our Church. Our Walther League Society has at present a membership of 22.

The above pictured two-manual pipe organ adds to the spirit of worship in the Ev. Christ Lutheran Church. This organ was manufactured by the Treu Organ Co., of St. Louis, Mo., and was installed at a cost of $1900. The organ was dedicated March 22nd, 1925. The money for this organ was raised thru the efforts of the Young People of this church.

The youngest of our church organizations is the Men's Club. It was organized on September 6th, 1934, with 7 members. Since its start the Men's Club has been affiliated with the First Lutheran Dart League. Our Men's Club has at present about 12 members. The chief purpose of its existence and its membership in the Dart League is, to foster Christian fellowship and sociability, to promote Christian knowledge and discussion of practical subjects, to advance the interest of the local congregation and the church at large. Pursuing such noble purpose and adhering to sound Christian principles and practice, there is not only hope for this Club to grow and prosper, in our midst, but for it to become a great influence in the Church's undertaking and accomplishments.

Robert Beagley is planning to move to Mokena on October 1st. He will reside in his father's place. The Orland Park Volunteer Fire Department has been busy the past week repainting and redecorating their truck preparatory to taking part in a big Labor Day celebration in Lemont at which new fire fighting equipment is to be placed in service by the Lemont Fire Department. Fire Chief John Helenhouse of Orland Park and the members of his fire department have had an invitation from the Lemont Fire Department to attend their Labor Day Festivities and the local department has accepted the invitation. A very large crowd of Orland people is expected to attend.

Last Sunday afternoon nearly 200 autos were held up on 143rd street while two auto drivers and a group of women were having an argument. According to the story, one autoist attempted to cut into traffic while coming out of the soldier camp driveway and in so doing, forced another car to stop suddenly. The driver became angry and after the first car got onto 143rd street, crowded the driver off the pavement and the fight was on.

Constable John Helenhouse was summoned and he in turn called the highway police. The scrapping autoist were finally calmed down and induced to get going.

Apparently it was all a fuss over nothing.

A large force of WPA men are engaged in road work in the forest preserve along 143rd street and Harlem avenue east of Orland Park.

A new dwelling has about been finished on the Harry Daniels place just east of the village on Keane avenue.

John Schmaedeke has received a new shipment of McCormick-Deering farm machinery which he has been assembling this week.

Dr. W. V. Schussler is on a business trip in the southwest.

Two young aviator photographers have been taking pictures of various farms in this vicinity from an airplane. The past week they took a splendid picture of the farm of Fred E. Yunker, supervisor of Orland township. The farm is located southwest of Orland Park on Wolf road. The picture shows a very fine aerial view of practically the entire farm. Mr. Yunker has a copy of this picture and is well pleased with it.

Next Tuesday the rural schools of this section will reopen for the next school year.

Taxes—The Public's Biggest Bill

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

Although the next session of Congress is still months in the future, certain Senators and Representatives are already discussing methods of collecting a larger federal income.

Opinions differ as to how the money shall be raised. Some members foresee heavier direct tax burdens laid on the shoulders of a larger number of citizens. Others look to greater yields, at current rates—dependent, of course, on hoped-for improvement in business conditions.

A few propose meeting the problem by curtailing government extravagance.

The American public would undoubtedly favor the plans of the last group. That is because the people realize from experience that all taxes, whether federal, state or local, ultimately come out of their earnings and savings; ultimately raise their living costs; ultimately shrink the value of their wages and the contents of their family market baskets.

They realize, too, that under these circumstances, heavy taxes constitute the biggest bill which the people, as a whole, are called upon to pay.

Many significant issues will confront the American people at the polling places this year. But of these none is more important to more workers and earners than that now being raised by members of Congress themselves—the problem of heavy taxes and their effect on the family pocket-book, on recovery and on re-employment.

And no candidate, regardless of party, could run on a platform more significant to the average American family than one which promised curtailment of waste of public funds supplied by the people through the sacrifices that heavy taxes entail.

For the people, as well as the candidates, know that high taxes and high cost of living are inseparable twins. And they want both held down to reasonable proportions.

Saint Buried in Mortar

Probably the principal point of interest in Algiers is the tomb of St. Geronimo, a Christian martyr of the Sixteenth century, who was killed by being smothered in a block of mortar. The cast may be seen in the museum of Mustapha Superieur in the suburbs.

Sunshine 4-H Club Lawn Party

Last Thursday evening the Chas. Sippel lawn in Tinley Park was a very enchanting place as their daughter Helen had succeeded in transforming the place into quite a delightful place for a lawn party for the 4-H Club girls. Despite the cool weather, the girls thoroughly enjoyed themselves in playing of games.

As this was a joint business and pleasure meeting, plans were discussed for our fall play. No definite date has been set but November 4 is being considered.

Mary Dowling told of her interesting trip to the State Fair. Mary brought a white ribbon home, Helen Feigel, a blue. Helen Sippel was also at the fair and all reported a fine time. After the adjournment, refreshments were served in the house and Eleanor Dowling favored with several songs. Edna Schult was a guest. The next meeting of the club will be with Mrs. Kane.

The girls departed thanking Helen for a lovely evening.

Threshing Ring Tenders Farewell To E. Woodcock

The threshing season was ending and as the ladies were bidding adieu they sadly realize on the next year neighbor Woodcock would not be with them for he is moving away the following spring. With these thoughts in mind, the ladies decided a Farewell Threshing picnic must be given.

It seemed hard to wait but at last the day came and on Sunday evening, August 28, 1938 the gang all gathered together at the Henry Schmaedeke home in appropriate threshing style, heavy laden baskets with eats, chairs, tables, games and everything to make the picnic one grand success.

Those present were the Henry Schmaedeke family, Fred Stuckey family, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Barlow and Hired man, Wesley Barlow and family, Rob Schmidt and family, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Woodcock, Elmer Feigel and Grandma.

The men were at first reluctant in joining the games until the ladies declared "that only those who worked could eat, and then oh how those men labored. They figured of course those who worked hardest could eat the most.

Everybody came on time so the party started with "Hail, hail the gang's all here". Even our WPA threshers and the guy who lost the argument on how to elevate the oats were there. The new baby who was a surprise to the gang was even present.

Seeing that we had been together so often and especially so long this year, next in order was "The more we get together".

Of course we had to have a "Review of the last threshing to remind Harvey that with earnest endeavor he might be the champion Bundle Loader next year if".

Mrs. Barlow knew there'd be plenty of dishes so gently reminded the girls there would be no "selling eggs" or "visiting twins" after dinner.

The "hang up" was a great success even though the "heavy corner post" gave way on a windy day. Mr. Woodcock surely knows his clothes pins. He even surpassed Elmer F. The "hold up" by the men was a fizzle.

Bob tried to show his wife how to really make folks hustle but they both lost out.

Wesley's folks all caught the train even the Mrs. Stuckey put her sweater on upside down. Herbert's gang was just one slip behind but lost out.

Elvira Stuckey showed the gang how to "write in the air".

Mr. Stuckey had a hard time guessing "what costs 45 cents" and oh how hard Irvin wracked his brain to know "what is made of leather and what flies out of it".

What a feed and oh how appetites had been worked up but the ladies knew "their threshers" so were well prepared with food.

Everyone knew who ate the most by the way their chairs sank into the ground.

The grandmothers enjoyed their party in the house.

Bernie tried her old stunt "hunting a new job" but failed and had to wash dishes.

The men did the chores and the ladies dishes after which the party continued.

Mrs. Schmaedeke knows her beans but Herbert is almost as wise. He's planning a "canned corn" picnic by himself.

Mr. Stuckey decided Alma is easy so Mrs. Woodcock really made him work.

John knows how to make Bernie "Smile" while Mrs. Stuckey thinks Elmer a bit "hard-hearted".

Alice says its easy throwing cards in a hat but try it once.

Nina and Beverly decided not to miss any of the fun so didn't take a nap.

Did anyone notice how Mr. Barlow looked when someone told him "the last thing" he did? We don't think Mr. Schmaedeke played fair on the last game. Hilbert thought he'd "sneak out" but it just didn't work.

Again ice cream, cake and lemonade and home.

Shall we have another picnic next year? No question about it.

SYNOPSIS

Richard Exon, a poor young Englishman, befriends elderly Matthew Gering, who at his death, gives him a statement claiming he, Gering, is Rudolf Elbert Virgil, Count of Brief, of ancient Austrian nobility who was betrayed 20 years before by his twin brother, Ferdinand, whose sentence for forgery he himself served. Ferdinand appropriated his title, property and daughter. Before he dies, Gering tells Exon there is a family secret, known only to the head of the house, to be found in the great tower at Brief, by a doorway none can ever find. Exon inherits his uncle's fortune and sets out to right Gering's wrongs. En route he encounters Percy Virgil, a chance at a garage, John Herrick, who is a linguist and who as a youth served as a page at Gering's wedding, and had visited Brief. Herrick agrees to aid Exon. They establish headquarters at Brenda Revok's farm at Raven, a few miles from Brief and make their plans. They find the castle almost inaccessible. They see a closed car occupied by Percy Virgil, a chauffeur and a woman. Hearing a dog scream, they see the chauffeur flogging it, just as a horse with a girl astride bounds along the path and is felled by a strung wire. The girl, unconscious, is picked up carefully by the chauffeur and woman, who then run away, after dropping her. Exon rescues the girl and carries her to his waiting car. He identifies the girl as Elizabeth, daughter of the disowned Gering, tells her of her cousin's plot to abduct her and takes her to Raven, where he tells her the story of her father and promises to go the limit to help her right her father's wrongs. Incidentally at first, Elizabeth gradually wins faith in her benefactor. Percy Virgil brings the police to Raven, announcing that two strangers are being sought for the kidnapping of Elizabeth.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

The sergeant swallowed, and Virgil put in his oar. "You may be strangers," he said, "but that doesn't put you above the law of the land."

"Nor, I trust," said Herrick, "beyond the traditional courtesy of its inhabitants. What is your rank in the police?"

Virgil flushed.

"I am not in the police," he said.

"Then why," said Herrick, "did you presume to address me?"

"My name is—"

"I have no desire," said Herrick, "to hear your name." He returned to the police. "You were saying that the matter was serious . . ."

Virgil looked ready to burst, but the sergeant went straight to the point.

"I will be plain," he said. "A lady has been abducted—a lady of high degree. She was kidnapped early this morning upon her father's estate . . . at Brief . . . some ten miles from here." He held up his map. "I think you will hardly deny that you know where that is."

"I have known where Brief was," said Herrick, "for 23 years."

The others stared.

Then—

"We are dealing with the present," said Virgil.

Herrick raised his eyebrows.

"Allow me to suggest," he said, "that you should keep to yourself such, er, discoveries as you may make." He turned again to the police. "Yes, gentlemen?"

The sergeant cleared his throat.

"In view, sir, of what has occurred, I must ask you to explain the markings upon this map."

"With pleasure," said Herrick.

"And I sincerely advise you to tell the truth."

"You will find," said Herrick, "that we have nothing to hide." He fingered his chin. "I stayed at Brief, as a child, in 1912. My mother and the Countess Rudolph were very close friends. Happening to be at Innsbruck a week ago, I felt a strong desire to visit the castle again. For various reasons I did not wish to leave cards. Much has happened, you know, in 23 years. My mother, the Count of Brief and the Countess Rudolph have died, the Lady Elizabeth has been born and, worst of all, I'm told that a vulgar blackguard, the son of an uncle of hers, has the run of the place."

A ghastly silence succeeded these moving words, the police regarding the gravel with goggling eyes and Virgil, dark red in the face, surveying Herrick with the glare of a baited beast.

"We, therefore, came here from Innsbruck on Sunday last. On Monday we started out to try to discover some spot from which we could view the castle, without going into the grounds. We only found one, and that was—too far away. Determined not to be beaten, we tried for the next three days—with the aid of that map. And all in vain . . . Last night we reviewed the position, and found it this—that we must either trespass or else go empty away."

"Now I do not like trespassing; but neither, I frankly confess, do I like going empty away. And in the end we decided to rise very early this morning, enter the park from the north and have a good look at the castle before anybody was up. And so . . . we did."

For a moment I thought that Virgil was going to faint. All the color was out of his face, which looked peaked and thin, and he did not seem to be breathing, but might have been turned to stone. Then a shiver ran through him, and a hand went up to his mouth.

But the police had no eyes for him. The two were staring at Herrick as though they would read his soul.

"At what times," said the sergeant, "did you enter and leave the estate?"

"We entered at four and we left about half past six."

There was an electric silence.

Then—

"I am bound to inform you," said the sergeant, "that what you have just admitted makes your position most grave. The outrage was committed this morning at six o'clock."

"Perhaps," said Herrick, "it was not committed by us."

The sergeant shrugged his shoulders.

"I shall have to—"

"I think it is clear," said Virgil, "that this gentleman is telling the truth." The two police stared upon him as though he were out of his mind. "I mean, if he were guilty, he would scarcely have made an

As the answer went down, I saw Virgil wipe his face.

"One of the three," said Herrick, "was a woman. She had a dog on a lead."

"A dog?" cried the police, together.

"A long-haired, black-and-white dog: a mongrel, about that size."

Struggling with his emotion—

"Sir," cried the sergeant, "I beg that you will forgive me if I have seemed something short. I have to do my duty, and your interest in Brief seemed strange. But now I know that you are telling the truth. The dog you describe was found at large in the park."

Respectfully thanking Herrick and handing him back our map, the sergeant begged that he would describe "the delinquents you so providentially saw"—and Herrick complied with a gusto which did my heart good.

His picture of Percy Virgil was actually taken from life. Lazily surveying his victim, he drew a merciless portrait of that unprincipled man: and I find it hard to believe wire—except a man who had planned to employ it that way?"

"Come, come, sir," said the sergeant. "You said yourself just now that these gentlemen—"

"I have changed my mind," spat Virgil, "as you have changed yours."

"I have just remembered," said Herrick, "that one of the men was called Max. Not the leader—the burly man, who got out of the car. The leader was sharp with him, as, indeed, with them all. I think that, if you could find them, they might give the leader away."

"And the name of the leader?" sneered Virgil. "Quite sure you didn't hear that?"

Herrick raised his eyebrows, before he returned to the police.

"You would not believe me," he said, "if I told you the leader's name. And so I prefer that you should apply to Max. But I'll tell you what I will do. I'll write it down for you, and I'll seal it up. And when Max has opened his mouth, you may break the seal. Thus I shall corroborate him, and he will corroborate me."

"Sir," cried the sergeant, "I beseech you to tell it us now."

"I will write it down," said Herrick. "Or, better still, Mr. Exon shall write it down. You will observe that I have not mentioned the name: yet he will go off and write it—which goes to show that he knows it as well as I."

With that, he turned to me and asked me to do as he said . . .

When I returned to the drive, Virgil was back in his car, beside himself with passion and shouting down the sergeant who seemed very much surprised.

"And if you choose," he concluded, "to take your cue from a couple of lying hounds who, if you had done your duty, would now be under arrest, you can take it alone."

With that he started his engine, let in his clutch and swung the car violently round. With storming gears, it squirted between the chestnuts and on to the road of approach.

The police stared after the fellow with open mouths: then they turned to see Herrick with a hand to his chin.

"I gather," he said, "that you find his behavior strange."

"I can't understand it," said the sergeant. "Ten minutes ago—"

"Quite so," said Herrick. "In fact, ten minutes ago he did his very best to get you away—because, when he heard the hour at which we had entered the park, he did not wish you to hear what I might have to tell."

He took the envelope from me and held it out. "You may open that now, if you please, and read the name of the leader whom Max will betray. After that, you shall have some tea, and then, we'll drive you to Gable to take what action you please."

The sergeant ripped the envelope open, and he and his fellow together peered at the sheet.

Percy Elbert Virgil

I thought they would never look up.

When at last they did, they seemed dazed; and Herrick called for Brenda and told her to give them some tea.

It was strange to sit down to supper later on with Lady Elizabeth taking the head of the board, but she seemed so glad to be with us and fell so naturally into the ways we kept that, for my part, I soon forgot how she came to be there and began to accept a relation which seemed too fair to be true.

admission which put the rope round his neck."

As soon as he could speak—

"But, sir," cried the sergeant, "a rope round the neck is harmless, unless it is tight. If every rogue was believed because he told such truths as could do him no harm—"

"These gentlemen," said Virgil, "have not the appearance of rogues. It only remains for you to beg their pardon and make a fresh start. Good God, man, when time is so precious, do you propose to waste it in prying into two strangers' private affairs?"

With a manifest effort, the sergeant controlled his voice.

"Sir," he said, "if you do not wish to wait, you must leave us here. I have a sow by the ear, and until I know it's the wrong one, I will not let go." With that, he returned to Herrick. "You have said too much or too little. You were at Brief this morning from four until half past six. Kindly relate what you did there—from first to last."

"With very great pleasure," said Herrick, folding his arms. "We left our car at the mouth of the northern drive—after instructing our chauffeur, first, to seek some petrol, and then to wait in a wood a little way off. You will understand that we did not wish to be seen."

"Is your chauffeur here?" said the sergeant.

"He is. If you would like to see him—"

"Proceed, if you please."

"Before we had walked very far, we heard a car coming behind us, using the drive. At once we lay down in the bracken until it had passed."

His face like a mask, Virgil took out his case and selected a cigarette: but I saw a bead of sweat fall on the gold.

"It was not your car?" said the sergeant, plainly impressed.

Producing a notebook, his fellow made ready to write.

"It was not our car," said Herrick. "Others were abroad this morning . . . within the confines of Brief."

"Describe this car, if you please."

"It was closed and its blinds were drawn: its number-plate was obscured—I imagine, with oil and dust."

The sergeant turned to his fellow, pencil in hand.

"Have you got that down?"

The other nodded and Herrick resumed his tale, relating how the car had been met and had then been backed down the drive and into the track.

"There three people got out, and the man who had met them came up."

"Would you know them again, sir?"

"I should."

that a rogue was ever so trounced.

Virgil's tormentor then repeated the horribly damning words which Virgil had said to his creatures before he had entered the wood, and when the sergeant seemed puzzled about the use of "the wire," suggested that it might have been used to trip a galloping horse.

Protesting their gratitude, the sergeant requested our names, and while Herrick was writing these down, turned and exhorted Virgil to enter and start the car.

"If you'll take us to Gable, sir, I can get on to Innsbruck from there, and in less than two hours from now every police station in Austria will be alive with orders to search for the people we want."

"Splendid," said Virgil, somehow. He turned to Herrick and bowed.

"Please believe that I shall not forget today . . . and that I am a man who invariably pays his debts."

"Is that a threat?" said Herrick.

I saw the police open their eyes, and Virgil in desperation let himself go.

"It's a warning," he snarled. "I do not believe your tale of the numberless car. That you saw a dog this morning proves nothing at all—except that you were at hand when the outrage was done. And who would think of so using a coil of wire—except a man who had planned to employ it that way?"

"Come, come, sir," said the sergeant. "You said yourself just now that these gentlemen—"

"I have changed my mind," spat Virgil, "as you have changed yours."

How high do birds fly in their seasonal journey? Actual evidence above the earth is still scanty, and only since the development of the airplane have definite altitudinal observations become available, writes Eleanor Allen in the Portland Oregonian. Earlier observers maintained that most normal migrations took place at heights above 15,000 feet. They attempted to justify their theory by an uncertain belief that flying became easier as altitude was gained. Aviators, however, are opposed to that theory, as it is found that with greater altitude there is increasing difficulty in maintaining speed and height.

From a considerable number of records based on the experiences of airmen, it has been found that it is exceptional in flying to meet with birds above an altitude of 5,000 feet, and that the bulk of migration is performed below a height of 3,000 feet from the earth.

Birds occasionally fly at great heights. Dr. A. F. R. Wollaston, when on the Mount Everest expedition in 1921, recorded godwits and curlews at 20,000 feet. It also has been recorded that an observer making photographic observations of the sun at Dehra in India obtained a photograph of geese estimated flying at an altitude of 29,000 feet.

Although it has been definitely established that the birds follow certain routes on their journeys to and from breeding grounds and winter homes, it is not generally understood that these routes are followed by the same groups of individual birds during successive years. This fact has been determined by the banding method carried on by the biological survey.

The Cross-Word Puzzle

Puzzles similar to the cross-word puzzles were known to the ancients. What is believed by some authorities to be the oldest cross-word puzzle was made by a Cretan about 2,000 years ago, a copy of which lies in the archeological museum at Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, Md. The puzzle is called the Phaestus disk, and was found on the island of Crete by an expedition many years ago. The first genuine cross-word puzzle of the modern type was composed by Arthur Winn and appeared in a supplement of the Sunday New York World on December 21, 1913.

Becoming, Practical Frocks

THE shops are full of beautiful new fabrics just crying to be made up in smart new fashions—and these patterns make it very easy to do your own sewing. When you do, of course, you can have many more clothes because it's so inexpensive to buy your own, fine quality fabrics—and then your clothes, and your daughter's, too, will have that distinctly made-to-ice has necessary bust fullness. Here's a dress that will be your favorite, when you make it up in the prettiest silk crepe, georgette or sheer wool that you can find.

For Slim School-Girls.

Your daughter will be delighted with the grown-up, slick look of this basque frock, and yet it's just as simple as a school-girl's dress should be. This is the style that growing girls, too thin for their height, look very well in. The high neckline covers up their collar bones, the puff sleeves and flaring skirt have a filling out effect. This style is pretty in so many fabrics—cotton, wool and silk. Especially linen, gingham, challis, jersey and for dress-up, taffeta.

The Patterns.

1563 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 5½ yards of 39-inch material.

1464 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Size 10 requires 2½ yards of 39-inch material, plus ¾ yard contrasting.

Success in Sewing.

For Large Women.

This afternoon dress is carefully designed to look well on large figures. The v-neck, cut in one with the shoulders, makes your face look less full. The short, rippling sleeves minimize the size of your forearm—and they're so pretty and graceful, too. The skirt is smooth over the hips, and the bod-

HOW to SEW By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IF SMOCKING seems to be time consuming, here is a short cut that saves hours. The first step is to shirr the material by machine. Loosen the tension slightly and stitch in straight rows; then pull up the bobbin thread to gather the material.

You will note in the sketch that some of the simple hand stitches are made over two rows of gathers and the others over a single row. Much of the beauty of mock smocking depends upon the spacing of the rows. The double rows of gathers in the sketch, No. 2 and 4, are ¼-inch apart. The space between these and the single rows should be about ¾-inch.

Another important point is the choice of colors and an interesting variety of stitches. In the arrangement shown here, rows 1, 3 and 5 are made in the darkest color by back-stitching over the gathers as in row 5 and then working loop-stitches through the back-stitches as in row 1. Row 2 is a version of plain feather stitching, and row 4 is done in the Cre-tan stitch. Variations of all of these stitches and dozens of others that will be new to you and your friends are fully illustrated in Book 2 offered herewith.

Bugle Calls

By Zeb Potter

"Listen, those 'brain trusters' at Washington are driving the country 'nuts' ", exploded the young man with the flaming red necktie as the train slowed down to a stop at New Lenox.

This of course is quite typical of the opinion of many after reading the Chicago newspapers on what's happening in Washington.

Let's take a look at a brain truster. In the first place he is an idealist. He has seen the present economic machine out of gear and has watched thousands tread the streets without work. In the second place he is an intellectual. He has studied philosophy, law, and economics. He has read the works of the thinkers, like Rousseau, Thoreau, Aristotle, Plato and others. As a rule he has had a teaching job in some university in the law school or the department of the economic sciences such as sociology and economics.

When he arrives in Washington he is given a job at from $6,000 to $10,000 a year with the title, third assistant under secretary to some big wig.

These brain trusters are just as sincere as you and I in wanting to better the present order. Unfortunately when their ideas are set into action through some law or commission, the practical politician enters the picture, and you know, of course anything can happen then.

In the history of this country we have had braintrusters or rather idealist active among the people. Take for example the events leading up to the Civil War. Religious idealists seeing the injustice in slavery organized the underground railroad, and thousands of blacks escaped with their assistance to Canada.

In defense of brain trusters in general allow me to quote from the report of one, incidentally this man today is on his way back to his teaching job in the university:

1. The moral and political needs of the people must not be sacrificed to economic efficiency.

2. There is no single cure for our troubles, no single system which will make our country a paradise.

This last point impresses me as sound thinking. This country is too diverse, peopled by too many different types of citizens to make one pattern of economic recovery work.

In Louisiana the basic common law is French in origin, the Code Napoleon. The unit of government there is not the county but the parish. Here in Illinois our common law is Anglo Saxon and our people are Nordic in majority and not Latin or Mediterranean.

We as a country have been criticized for not having a goal like Germany, and Russia. For my part those countries can have their goals and their dictators, give me good old American democracy. But democracy to work must take into consideration the fact we as a people differ in many ways from north to south and east to west.

No, brain trusters are not a bad lot. They want to do as much as you and I to help things, but don't ever kid yourself, human nature built as it is, will never permit the perfect state to exist, where in everybody is happy and contented; that I believe is a job for the next world.

PALOS PARK

Palos Juniors, girls' club, held a social meeting at the Shelter House on 86th avenue last Friday evening. There were seven members present.

The next meeting will be at the home of the treasurer, Patricia Saunders, 111th street and 85th avenue, on Friday evening of September 9th. All members are asked to be present at this meeting.

Plans are being made for a home talent barn dance which will be given soon.

Palos Boy Scouts held their regular Scout meeting last Friday evening. The Sunday school picnic of the Palos Park Community Church was held at the Shelter House last Wednesday afternoon and evening. The children attended the picnic in the afternoon and the adults in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hyink returned Monday after a week's vacation at Milwaukee and Ladysmith, Wisconsin.

Mr. George Stebbins is building a new garage.

Robert Gosey of Chicago is spending a few days visiting with Malcolm Harkness.

Robert Gosey and Malcolm Harkness hiked from Palos to Orland and back one day last week.

The Rainbo Bread Bakery in Joliet held their grand opening at their bakery on August 23rd. People entering the bakery were instructed to follow the arrows, which led the people into the stock room first. Here were stored various materials and supplies. The flour after being sifted was blended and mixed thoroughly with selected flours.

The boiler room contained machines that worked automatically. The flour is stored in this room after being blended.

The milk, shortening and yeast are kept in the cold storage room. The fermentation room or mixing room contains the two machines used for mixing dough. These machines have the capacity of mixing 1000 pounds of dough at one time. The flour is measured and weighed automatically before going into the mixers.

The proofing room contains the loaves of bread that is kept in warm, moist, conditioned air before going to the ovens.

The dough divider is a machine that cuts four loaves of bread at a time and eighty slices per minute.

The loaf rounder is a machine that forms the loaves into a ball shape and delivers it to the over head proofer. Here the loaves are put on canvas belts and carried forward and backward for about 12 minutes. The loaves are then dropped automatically into the loaf moulding machine. After the loaves are rolled and twisted, they move down a conveyor and are placed in pans and taken to the proof room.

The traveling ovens are huge ones that bake about 600 loaves at one time. They are called traveling ovens because the trays of bread automatically travel.

The bread conveyor is a long endless belt that carries the bread from the ovens into the cooling room.

The bread is then taken to the slicing machine which slices each loaf of bread in even slices and pushes the bread to the wrapping machine. The wrapping machines travel at fast speed which wraps each loaf in wax paper. Both the slicing and wrapping machines can slice and wrap 40 loaves per minute. Hot bread was served and the people enjoyed a pleasant evening at dancing.

The river is a post glacial stream having been diverted from its former channel by the Glacier. Along the east bank are ravines and canyons, the most important being Cold Water Canyon and Witches' Gulch, carved out by the waters rushing down from the Glacial lake formed by the melting Glacier northeast of the river. The water, rushing down thru these narrow canyons, met varying layers of hard and soft sand stone, which caused the water to form pot holes and whirlpools, which may be easily traced in the soft sandstone walls. These canyons are of more recent origin than the Artist's Glen Canyon, which is not as long, but is considerably wider, being U-shaped, whereas the other two are V-shaped.

The cross bedding of the Cambrian Sandstone can be easily traced all along the river. The Joint Planes have greatly influenced the course of the gorges, they are not straight, but run east and west with a series of right angle turns, caused by the variation of joint planes, of which there are two sets at right angles.
